Conclusion

Putting my general snarkiness of this topic aside, it's admirable that we have so much control over something that seems trivial. The `lineJoin` property's default value of miter is appropriate for many situations, but when you are using the `canvas` to represent charts or other very line-heavy things, being able to customize how the corners look is essential...maybe!