Bash command execution and passing arguments

Inside bash scripts, you can run any command or call another script, see an example of calling `uname` command which displays some OS details.

main.sh	`bash bashargs.sh Ubuntu`
bashargs.sh

Note that we use backticks to execute shell command and the input argument is initially stored in the built-in variable `$1`.